Here's what a query of the ChatGPT4 AI program says about Dr. Cobb:

Dr. Stanwood Cobb (November 6, 1881 – December 28, 1982) was an American author, educator, and pioneering Baha'i. He is known for his significant contributions to religious literature and education reform.

Here's a brief summary of his accomplishments:

 • Born in Newton, Massachusetts, he developed an interest in spirituality and philosophy at an early age.

 • He graduated from Tufts College in 1905 and went on to study at Harvard University and the University of Berlin. His studies were largely focused on philosophy and comparative religions.

 • After his studies, he traveled extensively throughout the Middle East and Europe, deepening his understanding of world religions and cultures.

 • In the early 20th century, Dr. Cobb became one of the first American members of the Baha'i Faith, a religion emphasizing the spiritual unity of all humankind.

 • He founded the School of the Nations in Washington D.C. in 1932, which promoted progressive educational concepts and aimed at offering a global curriculum.

 • Dr. Cobb wrote extensively on education, spirituality, and the Baha'i Faith. His works include "The Essential Mysticism", "Operative Mysticism", and "The Real Turk".

 • He was also recognized as a poet and was a member of the Poetry Society of America.

 • He lived to be 101 years old, continuing to write and lecture on spiritual topics until his death in 1982.
